BIG BUSINESS

We do not believe that the people of the United States have any basic hostility to what is generally regarded as big business. Certainly, any thinking man or woman realizes that modern economic enterprise has added considerably to the standard of living of our people.

What then, is the basis for the current critical attitude of the citizens to the leaders of mammoth business enterprises? The answer is so easy that it ought to be apparent to the leaders of capital everywhere and more to the point, it should have prevented some of the amazing gyrations that have almost convinced the majority of people that most big business is unfair, selfish and potentially crooked and under the leadership of men fired by nothing except an ambition to get all that they can squeeze out of a situation, regardless of consequences.

Everybody is familiar with the plight of the railroads. Their executives are unanimously insisting that something must be done. However, it doesn't help the situation any for the Senate committee, now investigating railroad financing, to reveal the practices that made up railroad financing, not so long ago.

Without naming names, because we do not care to pick out one of our similar instances, we cite the case of railroad that went into receivership in 1934. The year before, it paid its president $100,000 for special work on a consolidation plan, raised the salary from $80,000 to $140,000 and received a dividend of $3,700,000. The company, at the same time, was laying off workers and cutting on its subsidiaries for financial aid. Although its financial statement showed a "profit" of $3,781,000 this included a paper dividend of $1,000,000 from a subsidiary, which was never paid and was later marked off the books as "not an asset."

Such facts speak for themselves, revealing that the stockholders of the company were getting neither intelligent leadership, honest accounting, nor a square deal. Literally hundreds of thousands of such cases have been reported by the people who have been deceived by the practices of big business.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

To take part in celebrating a 64th wedding anniversary does not fall to the lot of many. Such a celebration was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Elam near White Oak on Sunday, May 8. With their children and grandchildren around them they declared they were happier than they had been on their wedding day 64 years ago.

Mr. Elam is a horticulturist and his business and religious life are pointed out to his family the right and successful way through life.

Rev. J. F. Walter, who presided by special invitation and gave a short talk.

The presence at the old home of all the children was a surprise planned and carried out by the children of the aged couple. A fine dinner was served from long tables in commemoration of service on similar occasion 64 years ago.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. McKinley Elam and children, David and Robert, Kelly Elam and children, Elizabeth, Catherine, Hubert, and Irene; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elam and sons, Walter, Edward, Norman, Verney, and Henry Lee Elam, Mr. and Mrs. DeLong and children, Harold, Mable, Del, Mary, Maga and sons, Dennis and Florida; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Elam and son, Carl T. of Morehead, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. McGinnis and Mr. and Mrs. Mer. McGinnis and son, Gary of Macon, Mo. and Mrs. Nick Elam and children, Buell, Nell and Gladine, of West Liberty; Noah Nickell and sons, Kirby and Noah Jr., of Ezel, Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Lykins, Proctor, Guillett and W. C. Nickell of Matthew and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Elam and children, Junior, Blaine, Helen and Roy Sterling.

Everyone present realized that this was really an occasion extraordinary and enjoyed the day immensely.

FARMERS' COLUMN

IMPROVE QUALITY OF TOBACCO

Although there is no sharp dividing line between tobacco growers and tobacco processors, those who grow the tobacco and those who process it are not the same. Those in the first class often sacrifice quality for greater production by planting more acreage than they can tend properly, says Russell Hunt, extension tobacco specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Under marketing quotas adopted by the growers and administered by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the "quality" growers are encouraged to become "quality" growers.

Large quantities of burley tobacco are used in the manufacture of cigarettes in this country. There also is a trend toward consumption of mild cigarettes in practically all of the western European countries from Portugal to Norway and Sweden, and it is expected to result in gradually increased exports as long as good quality burley leaf can be obtained at prices comparable with other types of cigarette leaf. Burley exports, however, are small.

Weather conditions often affect tobacco quality, but even in bad years with proper care growers can produce a good quality crop if they give careful attention to a few simple rules. Here are suggestions by Mr. Hunt for improving the quality of the burley tobacco crop this year.

Plan for disease control. When plants are set out in the field, or while the seedlings are in the greenhouse, check for mosaic infection. Mosaic is a virus disease which remains active in cured tobacco and is carried overwinter in the roots of tobacco plants that stay alive. The hands of workers who use tobacco, either smoking or chewing, often are contaminated and transmit the disease when plants are handled. The disease is easily prevented if hands are properly washed and the plants are set out by those who do not use tobacco. Tobacco users should wash thoroughly and change their clothes before handling the tobacco plants. If a few mosaic infected plants are removed and no other plants handled until the hands have been washed thoroughly.

WEEDS

So far, gardeners have had little cause to be concerned about the weeds among their vegetables, for there has been rain sufficient for both crops. Also, average temperatures have been low, and this has further favored the vegetables and operated against the sprouting of weed seed. From now on, however, the rains will slacken, the soil will dry out and the weather will become warmer, and this will operate in favor of the weeds, for they have been surviving through many unkindly seasons, and despite hard conditions.

The vegetables, on the contrary, are pampered pets, bred for production only, and dependent wholly on the gardener's effort in their behalf. This effort is summed up in one word, "cultivation"; the modern way of saying "working" the garden. The two terms are by no means synonymous, though the aim of both processes is the same but with quite different approach.

"Working" the garden consisted of churning the soil, cutting it with deep gashes and turning up to the sun the deeper, moist soil, for it to lose its moisture. Incidentally, some weeds were uprooted and some "smothered," at least for the time being.

Another aim of this working was to prepare the soil ahead of the root ends so that they could penetrate it, and still another was to "air the soil," so that the roots were supplied.

The beneficial part of this sort of "working" was that weeds were destroyed, though not all, for some of those that were smothered needed to be smothered again, but the other objectives, those of making the soil open so the roots could work into it, and giving these same roots air in the amount they needed it, were missed. For, any such loosening of soil that tends to run together and do bake could not be of permanent value, and neither could such airing of run-together soil, if in fact, plant roots need as much air as some persons supposed. Rather, to keep soil in easily workable condition, humus matter should have been plowed into it at the beginning of the season and the soil properly fitted, to take care of both its root penetrability and its correct aeration.

In the course of the "working," sometimes roots were laid bare and their ends cut off, but this was regarded as part of training to make the vegetables hardy against later hard times. If it rained, they repaired the damage, but they lost time, wasted energy that might have been used to better purpose, but the harvest suffered. If the weather was dry, the set-back was more pronounced, and sometimes the vegetables died.

So, deep "working," close to the vegetable roots, went out of fashion and "cultivation" came in, as taking less effort, to which there could be no valid objection, and as being infinitely kinder to the crops, especially inasmuch as cultivation accomplishes all that was necessary, anyhow, which is to remove weeds.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to those who were so kind at the death and burial of our little infant son, including those who prepared the casket, MR. AND MRS. C. W. MATHIS GRAY'S KNOB, AND GRANDPARENTS, MR. AND MRS. J. HENRY COLE.

Wm. Carter, is having his house painted this week.

Good news first in the Courier.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WAGES AND HOURS

Comported by the fact that the House Rules Committee had decided not to grant a special rule to provide consideration of the Wages and Hours bill before the House, President Roosevelt, last week, threw his influence behind an effort to secure 218 signatures to a discharge petition, which would automatically bring the measure before the House.

NAVAL EXPANSION

The Naval Expansion Bill was in conference after having been passed by the Senate, 56-28. Forty-nine Democrats and seven Republicans lined up for the majority and seventeen Democrats, seven Republicans, ten farmer-Laborites, one Independent and one Progressive cast votes against the bill.

Readers should understand that the measure is an authorization bill. It provides no funds for construction. The size of the United States Navy has heretofore been fixed by law, in conformance with naval treaties. The Expansion Bill, if followed by appropriate bills, will add ninety-six combatant ships to the Navy, 950 airplanes and 26 auxiliary vessels. It will also aid in the development of small surface craft and improve navyyards. The Government is directed to confer with other governments, signatories to the Naval Treaty of 1922, to ascertain if any nation proposes building battleships greater than 35,000 tons.

WAR MATERIALS

Because a survey of the arsenals of the United States shows that they will not be able to produce more than ten per cent of the army's requirements in time of war, the War Department has earmarked 10,000 of the nation's industrial plants for production of war supplies.

Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, says that the managers and owners of the plants know the jobs to be assigned them in the event of conflict and have expressed their ability and willingness to fulfill the orders. Under these agreements, all that the War Department has to do, in the event of war, is to begin war production. Already "educational orders" have been placed with some of the industrial plants in order to give them experience in manufacturing small quantities of necessary materials.

MIDWAY BASE

The Army and the Navy are co-operating in preparing a new air-defense outpost far out in the Pacific at Midway Island. Aerial surveys have been completed for a harbor channel and seaplane base to cost upward of two million dollars. After the work has been completed in about two years, similar work is contemplated upon Wake Island.

FOREIGN TRADE

In the first three months of 1938, American exports exceeded imports by $320,737,000. This compares with an import excess of $113,271,000 in 1937. The first quarter of this year saw $63,051,000 surplus of gold imports into this country but this figure compares with $395,983,000 import surplus in 1937.

THIRD PARTY

Governor Philip LaFollette's declaration of principles for the National Progressives of America, is generally considered a maneuver to maintain leadership of the progressive faction in American politics. The response has not been overwhelming. Mayor La Guardia, of New York, and certain Labor leaders have been particularly wary. Some liberals see the danger of a split in their ranks. At the same time, the thought is general that the LaFollette brothers, in making public a break with the President, have their eyes on 1940 rather than 1938.

FEDERAL HOUSING

A ten-year construction program to supply the housing needs of the Federal Government, costing $142,500,000 has been recommended to the President by his public building program committee. The report is based on a study of long-range needs of the various departments and independent agencies. Secretary Ickes, chairman of the committee, says that twenty projects, to cost $94,717,500, are suggested for the first five years.

Some people seem to go on the theory that their ancestors did all the work necessary for the family.—The Russell Times.

Eleven marriages and 34 children was not sufficient excuse for exemption from jail when John M. Cross, ninety-five-year-old negro who claimed Pike county as his home, faced trial justice Albert G. Perry at Tazewell, Va., on a charge of possessing untaxed liquor.—Pike County News.

Much confusion was caused in staid old London last Saturday by the arrest by Highway Patrolmen, assisted by Deputy Sheriff Henry McWhorter, of Mrs. Mae Gregory on a charge of driving an automobile while drunk. She was placed in jail and released the first of the week after the payment of a $100 fine assessed by County Judge J. D. Gross.—Sennel-Echo.

N. Y. A.

It was our pleasure a few days ago to visit the NYA and see the girls at work. They seem to enjoy their work and take great pleasure in turning out pretty, neat, well-made garments. They love to help in the designing. Their machine stitching is straight and all the hand work is carefully done. These girls are not dressmakers but they do want to learn and are painstaking. They were clean and neatly dressed. Some were wearing uniforms; others were working on their's. It is really surprising the beautiful work these girls are doing. Even the button holes are not only strong but are nice looking. The inside of every garment is very nicely finished, such as the most fastidious dressmaking shop would approve.

The supervisor, Mrs. Amy Price, is very critical in her inspection, insisting that in all their work they strive to excel. She requires the room, the machines, closet, etc., be neat and clean. The girls put their name on each finished garment and want to be proud of their work. Mrs. Price is firm, yet pleasant and they seem to love her and seem to understand that it is to their interest as well as their supervisor's to turn out good work.

The supervisor has no assistant, but the supervisor must do all the checking up of material, keep the girl's record, inspecting of work, etc. She has been notified that she will soon have a cooking department. She will also supervise the cooking. The NYA boys are fixing up a kitchen. The girls are busy making luncheon cloths and napkins. The NYA girls make overalls, shirts, dresses, and all kinds of underwear, from one year size to fourteen year size inclusive. They save all scraps for making quilts and rugs. The trimmings are used to stuff chair cushions.

MEANS BUSINESS

Worcester, Mass.—For the sixth time, Mrs. Josephine Kowalski wants a divorce from her husband. Three previous suits were withdrawn, a fourth she won, and later remarried the same husband. A fifth was filed and later a sixth. She means business this time, she declares.

COMMUNITY RADIO

Woodshend, Ky.—The people of this vicinity were made very happy Sunday, May 8, when they were presented a radio at the new Woodshend school building to be used for the purpose of listening to the sermons of Rev. E. Howard Cadle, W. C. Shall assemble here for Sunday school at 9:00 each Sunday and remain to hear our pastor's, (Rev. Cadle's), sermon.

This radio was a gift from the Cadle Tabernacle delivered to us by Mr. Wm. T. Arnold and dedicated by his wife, both of Dayton, Ohio. It is to be used solely for the interests of the kingdom of our Lord.
